Pastor Declares For Church Amalgamation

One Large Church With Two Ministers Is Suggestion

"The day will come when the Christian people of Newmarket will realize that there are four or five denominations which ought to be one," Rev. Dr. W. S. Alexander told a Christian-Congregational and Trinity United union service in his own church on Sunday morning.

"It will be a happy day," said Dr. Alexander. "Then there will not be ten or 12 places of worship in the town. You will not have so many churches to support. You will have a very competent minister, with a realization of his opportunities."

"That leaves me out," added Dr. Alexander. "I expect to be out before the Christian people of Newmarket wake up. Then there will also be a younger man, as an assistant, who will look after the administrative part of the work."

"That wasn't in my notes," postscripted the minister, "but I think it is just as worth saying as anything that is in my notes."

"I agree," was the comment of Rev. A. J. Patstone, rector of St. Paul's Anglican church when told what Dr. Alexander had said.

"One or two Protestant churches would be plenty for Newmarket," said Mr. Patstone. "And there should be one recreation centre for the town. I am not convinced that it is the job of the church to provide recreation. We do it because we are afraid our young people may drift to another denomination."

"So many of our denominational divisions belong to past history. And they were probably justified, but I don't think that they are now."

"The churches must do something or they will find themselves left high and dry. Times are changing."

"And perhaps fewer denominations would take the church back to what it used to be, or to something better than it has ever been. We will hope so."

Newmarket Couple Mark Golden Wedding Shortly

Recalls Visiting Kinghorn Tannery Over 50 Years Ago

Relatives and friends will gather at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Smith, Tecumseh and Itasca Sts., later this summer, Sept. 5, to be exact, to mark their golden wedding. They have lived in Newmarket 15 years.

Mr. Smith is in his 80th year. Born in Port Perry, June 5, 1859, he went to school there, and entered a tannery in 1876. He has been in the leather business ever since, leaving Port Perry when he was 20 years old.

"I was quite a rambler," Mr. Smith told The Era. He worked in New York, Chicago and Buffalo. He travelled for a Toronto leather firm for 20 years. He was himself in the wholesale leather business in Toronto.

"I remember visiting the Davis tannery at Kinghorn over 50 years ago," Mr. Smith recalled. "I saw

Mr. Smith was married in 1888 to Mary Diamond of Uxbridge. They have four children: Roy Diamond Smith, who served with the 15th battalion overseas, and George Smith, who are in the stained glass business together in Detroit under the name of "Diamond Glass Studio"; Mrs. George McPherson (Lillian), Mount Forest; Mrs. Walter Brown (Vera), Belleville; and eight grandchildren.

Next to the youngest of eight children, Mr. Smith is the sole survivor of his family.

Reds Don't Do So Well In Second Game With Hillmen

Hill Boys Have Seven Runs To Show For Seven Hits

The second play-off game with Richmond Hill at Richmond Hill last Thursday was a different story. Newmarket won the first of the three-out-of-five series by a 4-3 decision here a week ago Monday. The second game, however, went to the red-growers by a 7-3 score.

Newmarket was first at bat and did nothing. Richmond Hill started off after VanZant in the first inning and kept him worried until he was withdrawn from combat at the end of the fourth.

The Hill scored one run in the first, without getting a hit, and two runs in the second on only one hit. White crossed the plate in the first and the two Creans reached home in the second.

In the fourth the hill boys got three runs for two hits, as the result of wildness on the part of VanZant and errors behind him in the field.

The Reds were scoreless until the fifth when Tunney and Peters came home on the strength of one hit, one walk and one error.

Put in to take VanZant's place in the fifth, Niles held the southpaw scoreless until the eighth, when Richmond Hill got one run on three hits. Newmarket did the same thing in the ninth.

Tunney and Peters each singled, and then Cunningham hit a two-bagger, bringing Tunney in, but Peters got caught out between first and second. Then Pee-wee Hilton struck out to finish the game.

Richmond Hill had only seven hits in the entire game, and got seven runs. The game was marked by G. Stong's pitching for the Hill, walks allowed to the Hill boys and errors on the Newmarket side.

Mickey Smith got hurt and was taken out with the game half over. The Redmen missed Smith and Harvey Gibney, who was out of the game with an injured hand.

Newmarket: Giles, rf; Brammer, 2b; Smith, cf; Tunney, 3b; Peters, 1b; Cunningham, lf; Burkholder, c; Hilton, ss; VanZant, p, relieved by Niles in 5th. Smith relieved by Webster in 5th.

LIONS TELL OF PAINLESS HELP FOR YOUNG FRY

Opportunity Offered To Public To Have Share In Park

A dream of many years is coming true. It is a dream of a shady park and restful benches for tired mothers and their young "cut-ups." It is a dream that is already partly reality.

The Lions club has secured ground, between Church St. and Lorne Ave., which makes an ideal site for the long wanted park. The land is paid for, but there is a lot of work still to do. Landscaping and tree-planting will cost plenty.

So it happens that the Lions club is asking your help. The Lions club doesn't come to you for money as often as it used to do, but it gives to the needy youngster just as often as ever. The club is trying to stick to a policy of one appeal a year, with the exception of course of Christmas when a newspaper list is offered for those with bulging hearts who want to give the town's youngsters a little brighter Christmas.

The Lions club carnival comes on Wednesday, Aug. 17, at the Stuart Scott school grounds. On this occasion the Lions expect to raise money not only for some improvement of the Lions club park but also sufficient to carry out the year's work for the needy, principally paying the cost of sending youngsters to hospital for eye and tonsil operations.

The giving on this occasion will be made as painless as the free dentistry which your help will provide for the underprivileged.

Frank Courtney is in charge of the committee. You can ask him about what sort of a time he is going to provide, or you can make a mental note of the following result of The Era interviewing Mr. Courtney.

"There will be a chicken and ham booth," said Mr. Courtney. "We didn't have ham last year. There will be a doll booth. That's new. There will be bingo. That's new as far as the Lions carnival is concerned. There will be a refreshment booth. A money-wheel will be new. Another booth will be ring-the-money. There will be soft drinks, hamburgers and dogs."

"Tickets are being sold on a beautiful doll. Tickets are only ten cents each."

"We are anxious to sell the tickets on the big draw, because we are giving away over $400 in prizes. These tickets are offered for sale by members of the club."

"Is there any admission fee to the grounds?"

"No admission fee. Entrance is free, and everybody welcome."

Make Hay While Sun Shines But Cut Alsike At Night

Good Yields Of Alsike Reported In Stouffville District

Cutting of alsike at 3.30 a.m. is reported in the Stouffville district. Another popular hour is 9 p.m. Many farmers got a yield of six bushels to the acre, considered extremely good, and J. O. Spang, east of Stouffville, had ten bushels to the acre.

Alsike is a kind of clover and is not grown much in the Newmarket district. The Era learned from W. M. Cockburn, York county agricultural representative.

"They mow it at night when it is wet with dew to prevent it shelling," said Mr. Cockburn. "If it is dry, it shells badly. When they cut in the day-time they use an old-fashioned reaper with a table on it that catches the seed. The reaper has revolving rakes on it which throws the alsike out of the way of the horses on their next round. With a mower, men have to throw the alsike out of the way of the horses."

"It is the same with peas," Mr. Cockburn explained.

"The ground in Markham, the south end of Whitechurch, part of Vaughan, and in parts of Peel county is particularly suited to the growth of alsike," said Mr. Cockburn. "Mariposa township in Victoria county and the Cookstown district in southern Simcoe used to be famous for alsike."

"Where alsike is grown as a crop it is used entirely for seed and then is mixed with other clovers for hay."

Stanley Morning, second concessioner of King, got 16 bags of alsike and ten bags of sweet clover off ten acres.

"That wasn't very good," Mr. Morning told The Era. "It didn't fill out. The heat seemed to kill it. It usually runs seven, eight and ten bushels to the acre."

Mr. Morning did his cutting between 4.30 a.m. and 8 a.m.

VISITOR RECALLS EARLIER DAYS

A resident of Newmarket from a few months of age, when her family moved here from Quebec, until she was 12 years of age, Mrs. James Adie, formerly Kitty Smith, now of Point Pleasant, West Virginia, called at The Era office on Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Adie, her husband and her sister-in-law, Miss M. Adie of St. Catharines, Ont., motored here. They visited old friends and paid a visit to Newmarket cemetery, where the tombstone of Mrs. Adie's father, Rev. Wm. Wye Smith, pastor of a Congregational church which once existed in Newmarket, carries the inscription, "poet and preacher." Mrs. Adie's father was born in 1827.

The party visited Mr. and Mrs. Henry Elvidge on Monday.

Mrs. Adie recalled old days in Newmarket. She attended the primary school under Miss Lizzie Ross, which stood on the present site of King George school. She remembered the building of Alexander Muir school on Prospect St. in 1891 and attended the first classes there. She also recalled skating on the pond.

"Orchard Bench was the big summer resort in those days," Mrs. Adie said.

Mrs. Adie mentioned many of the old family names, Jackson, Brunton, Greenwood, Bogart, and she spoke of Frank and Carl Lloyd, who she said used to live where Dr. J. H. Wesley now lives.

"Wellington Bogart's photography studio used to be here," she said pointing to the Hillside Dairy. "The Era office was always here and the post office where it is."

Mrs. Adie has a granddaughter four years old.

PARENTS KEEP DEAF CHILDREN HOME - VISITOR

Work Of Belleville School To Help Deaf Is Described

The most important means of communication, even in this modern age, remains that between individuals, dependent upon the sense of hearing.

Without this sense, lack of which may mean that the individual does not learn to speak, anyone is greatly handicapped, and even the deaf person who has been taught to speak and to lip-read the speech of others is handicapped more than the public realizes, according to Miss Catherine Ford, directress of professional training, Ontario School for the Deaf, Belleville, who is spending the summer with her sister, Mrs. Wesley Boyd.

The Era put a lot of questions to Miss Ford and learned a lot of interesting things about deafness and steps taken by the Ontario government to deal with it.

"The school is one and a half miles west of Belleville on the No. 2 highway, and provides education for all the deaf children in Ontario, except a few in day classes in Ottawa and Toronto," Miss Ford said.

"We have 300 pupils, ranging in age from five to 21. It is supported by the government of Ontario, and is very generously equipped."

"There is a small fee but any parent who feels he can't pay may be relieved on the strength of a certificate from the head of his municipality. It is practically a free school. Practically all expense is taken care of by the school. Parents provide transportation and clothing."

"Any child in the province who is deaf and who would be capable of receiving an education if not deaf may be admitted," said Miss Ford.

One Newmarket child has been attending the school and is getting along nicely, and another member of the same family will be starting at the school in the fall. Another one of the pupils is from Scott township.

"Are all deaf children in school?"

"There are probably a lot of deaf children who are not in school," Miss Ford said. "They should be started as soon as possible to have at all a fair chance in life. We have children starting at 12, 14 and even 18 years of age who have never been to school in their lives."

"It is hard to enforce the school attendance law. Parents may say they are sending their children to a public school, although they are actually keeping them at home, and I don't know that you can force parents to send their children away to school."

"The school is divided into three departments, junior, intermediate and senior. Pupils stay in the junior department four or five years, depending on the age when they enter the school. That time is spent building up a vocabulary—that's what a deaf child lacks—approximately the same as that of a child beginning school."

"In the intermediate department there are rotating classes. One there a quarter hours of the school day are spent in vocational work."

Federal Tax Payment Plan To Be Used By Orillians

Reeve Dales Will Secure Information For Newmarket

In order to be listed as a municipality which has complied with the terms of recent housing legislation, the town of Orillia has sent to Ottawa a list of 58 lots which the town will sell for $50 each.

If a town is listed as having complied with the act the federal government will pay 100 per cent of the taxes on a new house the first year, 50 per cent the second year and 25 per cent the third year. The house must be occupied by the owner. The house is not to exceed $4,000 in value.

Orillia is also trying to interest a loan corporation in lending money to Orillia home-builders. The rate of interest would be five per cent. Formerly the loan corporations, whose loans are guaranteed by the federal government would not lend outside the cities on account of the inspection cost, but at the last session parliament voted a certain amount of money to cover the cost of inspections by the lending corporations.

Asked about this scheme by The Era, Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales did not feel that the town should encourage people to borrow money even to build houses, but he said that he intended to go into the subject to see what would be necessary to have Newmarket listed at Ottawa so that private citizens could take advantage of the tax-payment scheme if they wished.

"I think building is going very nicely in town," said Dr. Dales. "But if two or three more citizens were encouraged to build, that would be very nice."

Niles' Star Pitching Carries Reds Through

Hard - Fought Struggle Marks Last Southern Encounter

By LORNE McCORDICK

Newmarket became champions of the southern section of the Simcoe county softball league last night by defeating Richmond Hill 3-1 in a thrill-packed game at Richmond Hill.

Only the excellent pitching of Wes Niles in the pinches, backed by perfect fielding, enabled the locals to win, and the game was not in the bag until the last Greenshirt had been retired in the ninth.

Base Umpire Miller experimented with several types of hand motions to call the runners out or safe, throughout the game, never using the same set twice, which had Score-keeper Bill Kitting in a dither all evening trying to keep track of the runners.

These hand motions were responsible for Newmarket's first run in the second. Harve Gibney surprised all the opposing players by hunting on his third strike. This practically unheard-of procedure caught the Green-shirts napping and Harve reached first in perfect safety. A sacrifice by Peters advanced Gibney to second. Tunney reached first on a close play but was called out by the umpire, who at the same time used a peculiar hand gesture.

On seeing Miller's hands touching his ankles, the Green-shirts thought he was calling Tunney safe and raised vociferous argument. Gibney promptly romped home with half the Richmond Hill team clustered around Miller who assured them that he had called Tunney out. This run was

SELLING ELECTRICITY

In business it is necessary to be aggressive. Even if you have had the good fortune to invent a better mouse-trap than your neighbor, you must let people know about it or they will not make a beaten path to your door. Aggressiveness is just as necessary in municipal business. We are thinking of the town's electric business. It is a business and should be run in a business-like way. It should pay its way, and it should give the utmost service at the least possible cost. As is well known, the town of Orillia produces its own power and has made a considerable success of its electric business. It is just as possible for Newmarket to make a success of its electric business, but it is necessary for someone to be aggressive about it and push the sale of its only commodity, electricity.

Flat-Rate Heaters

Two of Orillia's latest moves are worth noting. The commission has just begun to install flat-rate hot-water heaters. These heaters get their electricity behind the meter and are charged for at the rate of $2 a month. Orillia is offering a 24-hour service. Newmarket hasn't its own plant and is paying $25.50 a horsepower for its electricity, measured at the peak consumption point during the entire month. In Newmarket there might be more profit in installing flat-rate hot-water heaters, and possibly other equipment, on separate wiring, which would permit cutting off the service during peak hours. The Orillia commission pays the cost of installing the meters and also insulates the consumer's tank. Orillia offers this service to those who already have a hot-water heater on the meter as well as to those who have no heater at all.

Subsidizing Stoves

Orillia is also encouraging the installation of electric stoves by paying the cost of putting in a three-wire service. If a consumer already has a three-wire service but no stove, and the consumer puts in a stove, the commission will allow a rebate of $2 a month for ten months (or $1 a month for ten months for a range). This offer is open only for two months. In other words, as an inducement to people to install electric stoves and so become bigger consumers of electricity, Orillia offers them what in many cases may amount to free electricity for their stoves for ten months. It looks like an instance of business in government, and points in the direction that Newmarket should move to give its citizens the greatest service.

MOTOR CAMPS

One of the needs of the modern town is a motor-camp. A motor-camp can be made to pay its way and makes a town more attractive to visitors.

HOW FAR CAN TAXATION GO?

The Globe and Mail has been running a series of front-page editorials under the title: "How Far Can Taxation Go?" These articles are sound insofar as they attack waste arising out of patronage or extravagance arising out of a desire to buy votes or lack of efficiency in government, but for the most part they are not specific enough to be of value. They are to be compared with proposals for railway economies which withhold information as to which lines are to be abandoned and what communities are to be left stranded, possibly to fade away.

What Are These Taxes?

Among these heavy taxes which the Globe and Mail complains about is the three cents you pay the federal government for taking your letter to Vancouver or to Glasgow. And if you send two letters you are more heavily taxed than if you send one. Among the taxes which the Globe and Mail complains about are the tariffs which make possible the great industries of Ontario and Quebec. The Globe and Mail would be the first to complain if they were lowered. These taxes bear heavily on the west and the far east, but we in Ontario and Quebec surely benefit. Among the taxes which the Globe and Mail complains about is the income tax, which takes only from those who have and have to spare. And looking at these taxes from the other side, they are the money spent for veterans' pensions, for relief, for national defence (and the Globe and Mail clamors for more expenditure in this direction), for mounted police and customs officials to collect the tariffs, for railways to carry Ontario's goods at a loss to eastern and western consumers. These taxes that the Globe and Mail complains about are also the taxes which the federal and provincial governments collect on liquor, the same taxes perhaps which the federal and provincial governments spend on old-age pensions. These taxes are the gasoline and motor licenses taxes with which the provincial government gives the public wonderful paved highways, which cause the public's railways to operate at a loss. These taxes are the money spent by provincial and municipal governments on education. These taxes possibly include the revenues and expenditures of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission. We hope not, but it would be just as sensible to include Hydro revenues, and C. N. R. freight and passenger revenues, as it is to include what Toronto people pay for having their garbage removed from their backyards or snow from their streets.

It All Depends

Taxation isn't necessarily a bad thing. It is better to be taxed three cents for sending a letter to New York than to have to travel to New York oneself. It would be better to be taxed for removal of our garbage in Newmarket than to have the present wasteful and more expensive competitive system of removing garbage. Our taxes would be higher but our total cost of living would be lower.

Let's Be Specific

There is extravagance in government. There are patronage evils. The Globe and Mail would give more service by using its facilities to unearth specific abuses rather than just to rail against totals. The Globe and Mail is performing no service to the mass of the people by its arithmetic complaints. The only effect of such articles may be to make governments give less for relief, for pensions, for education. That's where economies would be made first. The Globe and Mail should say which taxes it would reduce and which expenditures it would curtail. It should say whether it favors railway unification and the abandonment of existing lines. Until the Globe and Mail offers specific suggestions, we feel that it is wasting its space. We may add, however, that we believe that the articles are in good-faith and well-intentioned, but just don't come to grips with realities. There is no answer to the Globe and Mail's question: "How much of a person's earnings should go to government maintenance and the many services the governments administer?" In a completely socialized state, one's entire income might go to government and yet one might live quite comfortably. Surely the percentage of one's income that should go to the government depends on the number of services which the government gives in return, not to the individual who pays the taxes but to the community as a whole?

GARBAGE CONTROL

Barrie board of health passed a resolution last week as follows: "That the rate for collection of garbage shall be 25 cents per month, and that such garbage shall not be placed on the street or boulevard for collection." In Barrie garbage collection is a matter of private enterprise, as in Newmarket, but the board of health nevertheless sets the fees. A man who formerly received a dollar a day to look after the Barrie dump, is now to receive $12 a week. On the evening following the board of health's meeting, however, the Barrie council "abolished" the town dump and said that the collectors must find their own disposal point. If surrounding townships refuse to permit dumping, as Whitchurch refused the privilege to Aurora, the collectors may have to get more than 25 cents for hauling the garbage to some distant point.

CANADIAN INDEPENDENCE

Britain and France have made a declaration that an attack on one is an attack on both. There is much to be said for the good sense of such an arrangement. The fact is that Britain and France have more in common in the matter of defence than have Britain and Canada. This alliance emphasizes the need of Canada holding herself in a position to make her own decision as to war and peace. Should Canada be at war automatically because an European country attacks France?

A CLERGY RESERVE

(Contributed by Leonard Harman)

We have been camping for two weeks near the city of Madison in the state of Wisconsin. Near us have been the tents of ten preachers and their families. We have been the only Canadians taking the town-country leadership course; and we have been the only non-clergy as well. In fact we were sort of camp mascots until one of the preachers brought a pup.

After our two weeks of living in the little colony we have come to appreciate its inhabitants very much. We would prefer to regard our friends there as "ministers" rather than as "preachers." And we look forward to hearing from some of them again. All were conscientious people putting forth an intelligent struggle for the betterment of the communities which they serve. All were broad-minded and tolerant regarding other denominations and other points of view.

We organized a new community beside Lake Mendota. We had a mayor and council, traffic regulations, children's playgrounds, group buying and refrigeration, sewage and garbage systems, where had been an uninhabited grove of oaks sloping to the water. By common consent a few simple rules were adopted with the understanding that they should be adopted by all the inhabitants.

Most important of our new ten commandments was the traffic regulation. Cars must not be brought down the hill into camp but must be parked by the roadside. Some of the people who did not attend the public village meeting or who did not listen very closely found this ruling very irksome. It would be so much handier to have the car beside the tent. And it was very noticeable that women were the chief objectors. Perhaps they have not been educated for democratic responsibility. Perhaps they have not used their franchise and fulfilled the obligations which its possession implies. Or perhaps it is just their nature. But they did refrain from outright rebellion.

By the end of two weeks we had got pretty well acquainted. Little circles of special friends were forming here and there. We even achieved a measure of gossip around the village refrigerator. Then an accident befell the community: one of the women strained a ligament in her back and was unable to walk. For two days there was a question as to whether or not it might be broken. All were sincerely concerned. All were prepared to help the husband and children. Adversity had not been without value.

Besides this misfortune there has been another strong uniting factor. On the second afternoon of the school we had our first group recreation. After a couple of hours of icebreakers and playing party games there was a new spirit in the camp. Youngsters from half a dozen states, who had previously passed slyly by our tent, now stopped to chat about Canada and to tell us about their homes. By playing together we were learning to live together.

DOES IT PAY TO ADVERTISE, AFTER ALL?

The Renfrew Mercury published an item on June 28 to the effect that a citizen had ripe tomatoes in his garden. On the following morning ripe and green tomatoes had disappeared. The Mercury commented: "It pays to advertise, but to every rule there is the proverbial exception, to which might be added that newspapers are read alike by the just and the unjust."

REUNIONS

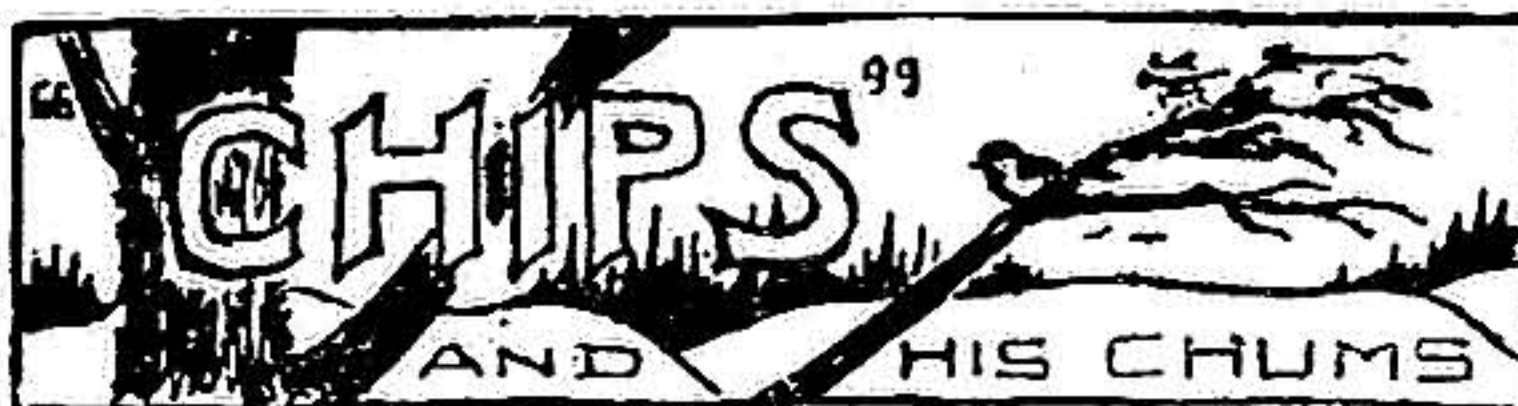

Collingwood is having a reunion of her former citizens. There is, we believe, a Collingwood association in the city of Toronto, which, if we are correct, will give the reunion a nice start. We once heard it said of an Ontario town that there were as many of its former citizens living in Toronto as at home. Mayor Boyd announces that Newmarket will have a reunion next year. If so, it is not too soon to start now to organize it and put it over in a creditable style. People living "afar off" will want a long time to think over a long trip. Incidentally, a number of Ontario towns in the last year or two have gone "into the hole" on reunions, but surely any loss could be charged up to "advertising." Every town should advertise.

WHO'S NEXT?

Hon. Earl Rowe has resigned the leadership of the Ontario Conservative party. Our choice for leader would be Hon. Leopold Macaulay, who has a winning smile and personality. Col. George Drew is a bit too much of a militarist for our particular liking, but he has lots of ability and might make the best leader. Mr. Macaulay belongs to the "old gang," of course, but he has had lots of time to think about the sins of the Ferguson and Henry administrations.

THE CHICKADEES HEAR A GHOSTLY VOICE

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"What's that?" cried out Young Chips sleepily. "I heard the funniest thing. Why it's still quite dark! It must be about four o'clock in the morning."

"Did that noise wake you up too?" inquired Merry. "There it is again. No, it was quite a different noise that time. I'm frightened."

"Well, it sounded like a Screech Owl that time," said Young Chips. "That's probably who we heard before, only the other call was certainly quite different from the usual Screech Owl's call."

"There it is again," shuddered Merry. "And that is not the Screech Owl's call! At least it's not any that I ever heard a Screech Owl make. It must be a ghost. I'm absolutely shivering with fright."

"D-d-d-d-d-d-d-d-d-d," said Young Chips bravely. "It couldn't be a ghost. Listen to that long drawn out wail. I think that's one of the Screech Owl's calls. But that one isn't," he added as another peculiar sound rent the stillness of the night. "I believe that's the same one we heard first. No, it's different again."

"Maybe there are several different people out there," suggested Merry. "I wish we were safe in our nest in the tree instead of just out here on this branch. Of course, it's much cooler these hot nights, but you never know who's prowling around out here."

"The creature seems to be coming closer," said Young Chips. "He must be quite near us. J-just listen to that blood-curdling voice. It's right behind us. Don't make a sound. He's coming this way. Sh-sh-sh."

"I actually felt the wind on my face that his wings made when he passed me," whispered Merry a few seconds later. "So he must have been pretty close, but I couldn't see a single thing."

"Well, I thought I saw a dark shadow, but I'm not absolutely sure," said Young Chips.

"I'm sure I won't sleep again tonight," said Merry. "My nerves are absolutely jumping with fright. Still, this ghost may come back and frighten us every night."

"Now, don't be ridiculous," replied Young Chips. "We'll just try to forget about it now and in the morning I'll make inquiries and see if any one else heard it."

Some time later, Young Chips was saying to Merry: "Well, I guess you fell asleep after all, didn't you?"

"I must have," admitted Merry. "And thank goodness it's daylight. Nothing seems so bad in the daytime."

"You get some breakfast and you'll feel better still," Young Chips advised. "I'm going to see if I can find out who was disturbing us last night."

As Young Chips crossed a brushy deserted pasture which had grown up with small trees here and there, he saw a flash of beautiful blue. He stopped to admire the beautiful color, set off against the green background.

"Why that's not Boy Blue, the Bluebird, as I thought," exclaimed Young Chips. "He's blue all over and therefore is an Indigo Bunting. Hello, Mr. Bunting. You're looking as handsome as ever, I see. That wasn't you making spooky calls before daylight this morning was it?"

"It certainly was not," answered the Bunting. "My song is always pleasing to the ear, I think I can safely boast. At least, we Buntings are always credited with having a pretty warbling call, aren't we, my dear?" he said, as his dull buffy-colored mate appeared beside him. She had only very faint suggestions of the blue of her mate and had whitish, faintly striped underparts.

The Era's editorial columns this week is one of the last of the series. Nobody can read these articles, or indeed any of Mr. Harman's articles, without feeling that he has a worth-while philosophy of the abundant life. Mr. Harman has gained the student's outlook on life without the help of the university, with the probability that his studies will go on long after the university man's studies have stopped. Northern York county is going to be mighty proud of Leonard Harman some day.

BARN-RAISING IN SIMCOE

A barn-raising at Coldwater is described by the Midland Free Press. "When the war cry was given the gangs armed themselves with poles, divided into pairs, and lined up on each side of the great sturdy elm plates, working on the theory that many hands make light work. The big plates were easily carried up the gangway and into the proper position by from 20 to 30 men, each laughing, joking and sweating in the torrid temperature. . . . Never in the whole work did the pegs which held the timbers in place seem to stick or not fit, never was any groove out of plumb or in a wrong place. . . . After the structure was erected it was man's chance to rest and the feminine corps which had been working and watching in the afternoon swung into their culinary parade. The night previous a dozen ladies cut up 30 loaves of bread, baked 50 pies and countless numbers of cakes and cookies. . . . Few of the men and women who toiled at this affair will remember the straining muscles or tired bodies, but rather they will think of the friendships fostered, the fellowship enjoyed that comes with honest work well done. It was a great day."

SYMBOLS

These are the days of signs, symbols and signatures.

Over the radio, when we listen for certain programs, we hear, first and last, their musical signature—we know who is on the air before we hear either the announcer or the well-known voices of our favorites.

The music is a sort of symbol of what we will hear—we associate it with what follows—and in these days of extensive advertising the symbols of everything we wish or don't wish to purchase, meet our eyes, wherever we go. We grown-ups are a good deal like children after all—we have to SEE things to make us believe.

To the non-Christian world our great cathedrals and our little country churches are alike, a symbol of our belief in Christ.

And so it is, that for nearly everything that affects our life or the life of the nation, we have symbols.

It follows, then, that when our great commonwealth of nations wished to assert its belief in the justice of its democratic foundation and its accord with another nation, whose motto also is liberty and equality, each part of the commonwealth did not write the sister nation a note, or just publish a few assertions of friendship. Oh, no, they sent the crown—the symbol of our nation, to show, beyond all manner of doubt, that the freedom from tyranny, the right to live our own lives as we see fit—if we are law-abiding—the right to worship as our conscience bids, is as dear to us as when our forefathers fought for those rights.

One can imagine few harder jobs than to be a king or queen.

I suppose in the days when the divine right of kings was never questioned, the task was an easy one—a king did as he saw fit—he loved his friends and hated his enemies—and acted accordingly, with too often dire results where the enemies were concerned.

But to be a king in a democracy is another matter. He must live that the people over whom he has been placed can find no fault; his will must never be exerted in direct opposition to the will of his counsellors.

He must never by word or deed, say or do anything which would, in degree, compromise his position. In fact, from his accession to his death, he is more bound by rules and regulations, than the poorest of his subjects.

But there are compensations, I think. He is the heart of the empire—the clasp on the rosary that binds the widely separated beads on the chain of empire firmly together.

And so, the King, putting aside the weakness that inevitably follows illness, and the Queen—putting aside the longing of the grief-stricken for quietness, fared forth, to symbolize the determination of the great solid mass of British people—their determination to stand shoulder to shoulder with France, against the insidious encroachment of the nations where personality is nil, and the state is everything.

One can imagine that for the Queen, at any rate, the strain is nerve-racking. Aside from the necessity to cover her grief, to be always sweet and gracious—must lie the fear that be precautions for his safety ever so good there is always the possibility that some fanatic can reach the King.

One remembers King Alexander of Yugoslavia, and can understand WHY the Queen must be under a terrible strain and WHY she would insist on accompanying the King.

The sight of two great democracies, by symbols and by word of mouth, making clear their attitude to a continent gone mad, is a heartening sight.

And when "the shouting and the tumult dies," and the reverberations of the cymbals and drums have shuddered into silence, let the prayer "God Save the King" and what he symbolizes, still be heard.

POLICE COURT GIVEN SEVEN DAYS ON DRINK-DRIVING

Convicted on a charge of driving while intoxicated, Henry Drury, Binscarth Rd., Toronto, was sentenced to seven days in jail by Magistrate W. F. Woodliffe in police court here on Tuesday.

A charge of unlawfully having liquor was changed to consuming and Drury was fined $10 and costs of $11.30, or ten days, and the liquor was ordered to be confiscated.

Frank Callahan, defence counsel, put in a plea of guilty on both charges. Two additional charges of failing to remain at the scene of an accident and reckless driving were withdrawn on the consent of the crown attorney, N. L. Mathews, K. C.

Although several crown witnesses were present, only the evidence of the two officers who investigated the accident at Sutton was heard.

"On Saturday, July 16, I was called to an accident at Jackson's Point," testified Acting Chief George Stuart. "I investigated and found that Officer McCallum had been there and left. He appeared five or ten minutes later with Drury in custody. I took Drury and McCallum to investigate the accident. Drury was noticeably under the influence of liquor. He had to be assisted into Dr. Beattie's office, and in my opinion he was drunk."

"At six forty-five as the result of an investigation of an accident I went to a barn nearby and found a quantity of liquor which Drury admitted he had in his car," stated County Constable A. McCallum. "I found four full bottles and one part bottle. There was considerable damage done to both cars involved in the accident."

"The damage to both cars is being repaired now," stated Frank Callahan, defence counsel. Bail was set at $200 for Thomas George West, Holland Landing, charged with being drunk while in charge of a horse-drawn vehicle. The case was adjourned one week.

Two charges of theft laid against Fred Hollingshead, and John Foster, both of Holland Landing, were withdrawn by the magistrate. The charges were laid by Frank Bilston who did not appear in court on Tuesday. The charges are the result of a case that was heard in court here last winter when Foster was ordered to give back the house he was living in to the owner, F. Bilston, and to move it back to Bilston's property.

On a charge of operating a summer booth without a license, George Preston, Preston Lake, was ordered to buy a license for $10 and to pay court costs.

A charge of unlawfully having liquor was changed to consuming and A. Raynor, Toronto, was fined $10 and costs of $8, and the liquor was ordered to be confiscated.

Two charges of unlawfully having liquor and keeping liquor for sale laid against Newton Williamson, North Gwillimbury township, were remanded for hearing two weeks. Bail was set at $500.

After being in custody two and a half weeks Dayton Platten, Ken Newstead, and Eric Hall, all of Toronto, were each given suspended sentence and placed on probation for one year. The three youths were convicted on a charge of breaking and entering a service station booth at Keswick. On an additional charge of joy-riding, Newstead was also given suspended sentence.

The magistrate ordered that a warrant be issued for the arrest of Walter L. Dymond, Toronto, charged by Chief Constable Fisher Dunham of Aurora with keeping a common gaming-house.

A charge of passing another car on the highway laid against Jack Silverman, Toronto, was dismissed by the magistrate. Provincial Constable A. O. Ferguson testified that Silverman cut out of a solid line of traffic going north on the curve at Holland Landing, then cut back into the line again. As there was little traffic going south at the time the magistrate dismissed the charge.

The magistrate dismissed a charge of reckless driving laid against Herbert H. Redmands, Toronto, and stated that it was a case for the civil courts.

"I was driving south on Yonge St. near Oak Ridges and I saw a truck parked on my right-hand side," testified C. C. Ping, Bradford. "I honked my horn but no one paid any attention. Then the truck started up and I had to put on my brakes, but Redmands' truck came right for me and I hit him. He never put out his hand at all."

"There were no skid marks left by the Ping car," stated Officer Ferguson. "The damages to the truck were about $100 and Ping's car is a total wreck but I think it was worth only about $100."

"I was going to Lake Wilcox with a load of papers and I made the wrong turn," testified Redmands, driver for the Ontario News Company, Ltd. "Then I came back to the highway and made another wrong turn. The car driven by Ping crashed into me. I think if Ping had used his brakes the accident would not have occurred."

"How long have you been driving?" questioned the magistrate. "For 14 years and I have never had an accident," answered Redmands.

A fine of $5 and costs, or five days, was imposed on Dr. Harold F. Robertson, Toronto, for speeding in Sutton.

This case was given considerable discussion at the court last week when S. C. Biggs, law student, appearing for Dr. Robertson, stated that the signs on the road leading from the Lake Shore highway into Sutton were not placed in the right positions to allow motorists to know they were in the village. The case was adjourned for one week to allow Constable Shadwick time to measure the size of the signs and to find how many there were and their position.

There are four signs on this road warning motorists that they are in the village of Sutton but they are not all placed at right angles and are difficult to read, it was said by Constable Shadwick.

"I went over this road and I had difficulty in reading the sign at 30 m. p. h. until I was up even with it," stated S. C. Biggs.

"There are four signs and that should be plenty to give sufficient warning to a motorist, but the signs should be placed at right angles to the road," stated the magistrate. "Thank you very much, Mr. Biggs, for the time you have spent on this case and the diagram you have shown me. This is in the interest of numerous other motorists."

Convicted on a charge of reckless driving, Francis Gouneau, Toronto, was fined $10 and costs, or ten days.

"I was driving my father's car on the third of East Gwillimbury," testified Fred Johnston, Queensville. "It was about 12.15 a.m. on a clear night. I was going north and there were four others in the car. I was not going fast and was about one foot from the east edge of the road. I saw another car coming and it came right for me from the north. It struck my front fender and running-board and caused other damages to the extent of about $75. My car went about 50 feet after the impact. The other car went 100 yards south."

Mrs. F. Johnston corroborated the evidence given by her husband.

Harry Smith, who was driving his car behind Johnston's, stated that Johnston was on his own side and that Gouneau came straight into Johnston's car.

"I was called to the scene of the accident," testified Officer J. Sloss. "There were short skid marks at the point of impact, and these were about six feet from the edge. It is likely the lights on Gouneau's car would be the strongest, as his car was a newer make."

"There are a lot of small hills along that road and my lights might have caused me to swerve over," stated Mr. Gouneau. "I was not driving my own car at the time of the accident."

Richard Cooper, Claremont, bad lights, $2 and costs, or two days, charge laid by Provincial Constable A. O. Ferguson.

Jack MacCormack, Toronto, speeding, $15 and costs, charge laid by Constable Ferguson.

Doreen Sutherland, Toronto, speeding, $10 and costs, charge laid by Constable Ferguson.

Horace C. Routh, Toronto, passing, $5 and costs, or five days, charge laid by Constable Ferguson.

Gordon Canning, Toronto, no operator's permit, $10 and costs, or ten days, charge laid by Constable Ferguson.

A. Stirling, Toronto, speeding, $10 and costs, charge laid by Constable Ferguson.

Arthur B. Fisher, North York, speeding, $10 and costs, charge laid by Constable Ferguson.

John O'Brien, Toronto, passing, $5 and costs, or five days, charge laid by Constable Ferguson.

Jack Creed, Toronto, speeding, $20 and costs, charge laid by Constable Ferguson.

Deafness An Increasing Problem, Visitor Relates

During the intermediate school period, the pupils are given an opportunity to do some work in every vocation, so that when they enter the senior department they are familiar with all the vocations taught and are able to make a choice of the vocation they will follow in senior department.

"In the senior department they spend three hours a day on regular school work and three hours a day on vocational work.

"The academic course for those who are capable of taking it leads to entrance and one year of high school. For those not capable of academic instruction their school work is just what will be most useful to them.

"Would you be interested in hearing the vocations taught? Boys' vocations are printing, linotype operating, shoemaking and repairing, carpentry and cabinet making, cleaning and pressing, baking, barbering, typewriting and business procedure, agriculture in various forms, poultry, horticulture and floriculture, and commercial art.

"The school has a fine farm of 200 acres. Everything is being done to interest the pupils in agriculture because we feel that it is one of the things they can learn.

"For girls we have dress-making, power-machine operating, cooking and food work, beauty parlor work, commercial art, typewriting.

"Pupils may stay at school until 19 or 20 or even 21, provided that they are learning.

"Most needed is a little better understanding on the part of the public when these pupils start out in search of jobs. An organization is being formed now to do work similar to the work of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

"We have three fine residences, one for the boys, one for the girls and one for the juniors, and a hospital.

"Fifty per cent of our pupils have acquired deafness. With 50 per cent it is congenital, that is, inherited. It may be in the family. It may result from social disease. It may be the result of too close marriage. We have four pupils from one family, and another one is coming in the fall from the same family.

"We have around 40 pupils entering every year, and two or three of them are in the 16 or 18-year-old group.

"At the C. N. E. this year it is planned to have an exhibition of work done by the pupils.

"Very few children are totally deaf. Deafness is sometimes caused by spinal meningitis and scarlet fever. If the children have lost their hearing after four or five years of age, they have natural speech.

"We have children deaf from birth, and we have them ranging from hard-of-hearing to total deafness. And we have all grades of mentality."

Miss Ford said that the school was making increasing experiments with loud-speakers and hearing aids.

"The importance of taking children to a doctor as soon as there is any indication of deafness should be emphasized," Miss Ford said.

"Does a person born deaf learn to speak naturally?"

"Acquired speech" lacks inflection," said Miss Ford. "We can't afford to spend too much time on speech. It is very nice to have good speech but learning to earn a living is more important.

"Our pupils do well in sports and do well in the district school meets.

"In religion they are extremely well looked after. All the teachers teach on Sunday, and the pupils are taken to church."

"How do you begin to teach a child who has been born deaf?"

"We start with simple commands, 'Sit down,' 'Get your pencil,' and the names of simple things, and repeat and repeat and repeat, until the child can read these words from your lips.

"Beginning with little children is very fascinating—they just have what you give them. We use pictures a lot. I think we have the most beautiful school in the country. Everything is done for the happiness of the pupils, even to observing their birthdays.

"The teacher doesn't make any extra effort to enunciate clearly. She doesn't mouth the words. She speaks naturally."

Miss Ford told of one child whose training she had started personally at three and a half years of age, the child of parents who were first cousins. This child is attending a private school in the U. S. and is so bright that she will reach high school at the same age as a child with hearing. There are two children in this family and both are deaf.

"Deafness is a tremendous handicap because a deaf person lacks normal. Yet the deaf person lacks communication with others. Everybody minimizes deafness because it isn't evident. Therefore a deaf person gets less consideration and sympathy than any other type of handicapped person.

"A deaf person can learn to speak English, but you haven't any idea what an effort it is just to teach a few simple words. Think of the difficulty we have with our sense of hearing in learning another language.

"The deaf person cannot communicate normally and the world looks at him rather askance. It is when the pupil gets out in the world that difficulty may arise. Perhaps the pupil cannot get a job and becomes despondent. The deaf person may not be able to take the hard knocks. We try to make them sufficient unto themselves."

Miss Ford explained that while the school teaches only lip-reading, the pupils themselves pick up finger-spelling and what is known as the sign language.

FATHER UNITES YOUNG COUPLE

A wedding of much local interest was solemnized in St. Paul's church, Newmarket, on Friday last, when Dora Lucy Muriel Patstone became the bride of Lorne Harrison Collingwood. Harry Collingwood is a local boy who, after passing through the school here took his M.A. from the University of Toronto. He is now on the staff at Peterborough Collegiate.

Muriel Patstone, after leaving Haverhill College, took a commercial course here, and has been for some time dominion secretary of the Anglican Young People's Association in the office in Toronto.

The ceremony was performed by the rector of St. Paul's, Rev. Arthur J. Patstone, father of the bride.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion by the members of the Chancel Guild and other friends. As the bride entered the church the ladies of the choir sang Albert Ham's setting of the wedding march from Lohengrin.

The bride wore a gown of white faille taffeta with finger-tip veil, head-dress of white carnations, and carried a bouquet of red roses and gypsophila.

The bride was attended by her younger sister, Mavora, in a gown of pale blue sheer with pink velvet trimmings, pink picture hat, and carrying a bouquet of pink sweet peas and gypsophila.

The bride was given away by a younger brother, Cyril Patstone.

The groom was attended by Loftus Buckley as groomsmen. The ushers were Ronald Patstone, brother of the bride, and Harold Patterson, a friend of the groom.

During the service the choir sang the 67th psalm, and during the signing of the register the hymn, "O Perfect Love." The party left the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March. Mrs. J. O. Little, organist of St. Paul's, presided at the organ.

After the ceremony a reception was held on the rectory lawn, where the guests were received by Mrs. Patstone, mother of the bride, gown in mauve georgette with white accessories, and wearing a corsage of mauve sweet peas. She was assisted by Mrs. Collingwood, mother of the groom, wearing a navy blue sheer gown, and corsage of pink bunts but with little success, as all rolled directly to Bennett in the pitcher's box.

It was a hard game to lose but in going down to defeat Richmond Hill allowed none of the ill-feeling which broke up the last contest to enter, and in every way showed good sportsmanship all evening.

It is probable that Richmond Hill will be here Monday evening to stage an exhibition game with the locals, in connection with the street dance. The Greenshirts are planning to bolster their team with several imports, so a hard-fought game is in the offing.

Newmarket will meet Allandale winners of the northern group, possibly next week, to decide the championship of the league.

Richmond Hill Team Leaves In Disguist As Protest Disallowed

By LORNE MCCORDICK

Newmarket obtained a stranglehold on the championship of the southern section of the Simcoe county softball league Monday by defeating Richmond Hill 6-2 before a large crowd at the local park. This gives the locals two victories to the Hill's one in a best-three-out-of-five series.

The game ended abruptly in the second half of the eighth with Richmond Hill refusing to play further when the umpire would not allow their protest about two of Newmarket's runs.

The score was tied 2-2, as the locals went

Hazards Of Riel Rebellion Expedition In '85 Recalled

Aurora Men Returned From West Just 53 Years Ago Today

It was just 53 years ago this Thursday that 44 officers and men, recruited from Aurora and Sutton, arrived home from their arduous service in Saskatchewan in the Riel rebellion. The Era learned from Major W. H. Taylor this week.

Major Taylor was then color-sergeant of the group that went out with the 7th Company of the York and Simcoe, a unit made up of the 12th York Rangers and the 35th Simcoe Foresters.

"We took the train to Chap-leau," the major explained. "Then we went 60 miles on flat cars, followed by a 28-mile trip across ice. A train took us 14 miles to Red Rock and then to Port Arthur and Winnipeg.

"On April 2, after a week in Winnipeg, we got a hurried call to proceed to Qu'Appelle in Saskatchewan. After we were there three weeks, we made a 160-mile trip on foot to Humboldt. "We began the return journey

AURORA CLUB HOLDS OPEN TOURNAMENTS

Two open tournaments are being held by the Aurora Bowling club: on Friday night the men's doubles will compete and mixed fours are scheduled for Monday afternoon.

on July 9 using wagons, train and boat.

"It was a hard trip. I wonder sometimes how we got through it."

Charlie Crockett and Billy Ough are two other Aurorans who made the journey and who are still alive, though the former is now living near Brandon, Manitoba, Major Taylor believes. He still has the old note-book from which he made his roll-call, but hardly needs it. The names are still familiar.

A scar from a bayonet cut still reminds him of the time when that weapon had to be used to rouse him when he was nearly frozen to death on a flat car on the trip out. The group were poorly equipped and left on short notice.

Men From Shoe Factory Show Fine Display Of Hitting

Softball fans who like their sport on the cheerful side, without the bitterness that so often accompanies the hard-fought league games, are getting a big kick out of the town league games played in the park on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Starting on Monday of last week, the tannery team took the towners for quite a loss. On Wednesday, the Sisman squad nosed out the foundry players by 13-12 in a keenly contested struggle.

Sisman and the towners met on Friday night for the third game of the series, and the men from the shoe factory put on a batting display that had the town fielders running circles. There were a number of butter-fingers

Builders Report Busier Season; Many Town Homes Redecorated

Modernization Of Houses Becomes Popular This Summer

A wealth of building and renovating jobs, big and little, have made the summer of 1938 an unusually busy one in Aurora, builders state. While few new dwellings have been erected, there has been a good deal of modernizing of present homes.

A big change has been made at the corner of Yonge and Centre Sts. The new home of the Aurora Dairy is nearly completed and sidewalks have been levelled out. The retaining wall in front of the theatre and coffee shop is finished and broad cement steps lead up to both places. Mr. Warren has shown his interest in the changes made by redecorating the theatre front and lobby.

At the other end of the business section, F. D. Lacey, inspired by the new front on Dawson's Grill, has made a fine job of redecorating his store front. Further downtown, C. E. Lundy has added to the attractiveness of his premises.

The Baldwin property on Temperance St. boasts a new roof and another, on Mosley St., has had a complete outside modernizing job done on it. The Fleury property on Maple St. has also been modernized, and throughout the town a good number of homes, resplendent in new paint, have brightened the appearance of the community.

TAKES SHARE IN TORONTO MEETING

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Harrison are in Toronto this week, attending the annual convention and educational conference of the National Chiropractic Association. Many of the leading educators of the profession are on the educational program and subjects scheduled for discussion cover wide field.

Entertainment features include a moonlight excursion to Niagara and a trip to Port Perry, where ground will be broken for a monument to David Daniel Palmer, founder of chiropractic, who was born there in 1845.

YOUNG NET STARS TO HAVE TOURNEY

Following the defeat of the Newmarket Tennis Club by Allandale, the Aurora club was then advised to make arrangement with Uxbridge, described elsewhere on this page.

After the bills were paid the local club found it had derived the sum of $25 from the opening celebrations held by the club on Thursday of last week. A cheque for this amount will be handed to Councillor George Baldwin, chairman of the town's light department.

Mayor Dr. C. R. Boulding is donating a trophy to be awarded to the winner of a club tournament to be held in the near future. Another trophy is available, it is stated, for the winner of a tournament to be held for boys 18 years of age and under, and it is hoped to stage a similar competition for the girls.

The younger players are continuing to show an interest, improving their game, Keith Davis reports, and a plan is being considered that will enable the players to see the big stars of the game in action, by means of motion pictures.

GOLF SECRETARY IS OPTIMISTIC

Pleasure in the state of the club this year and an optimistic forecast for 1939 were made this week by Secretary De Pencier of the Aurora Golf and Country Club.

"The course has never been in better shape," Mr. De Pencier stated. He gave considerable credit for this to the new professional hired this year.

A number of city folk had joined the club recently, he said, and it is hoped to have more members from this source if the course continues to improve.

ABOUT TOWN

HOW'S YOUR LIVER?

We often wish we were run by electricity. By sleeping in the day time and working only at night, we would probably get a special rate for off-peak power and would thus be able to live very cheaply.

This business of eating is costing us money, yet we don't seem to be able to stop it. We know it's just a habit, but to date our will power has not been sufficient to prevent us making the daily trip to the butcher and the baker.

And now, just to make things worse, the doctors have stepped in. The doctors have given us liver trouble.

To explain—the other day we dropped into the butcher and asked for some calves' liver.

"It's 40 cents a pound," the butcher said.

"Then we don't want any," we replied.

"That's all right," he stated, affably. "We haven't got any, anyway."

"Why is that?" we asked. "It's the doctors who are responsible," he informed us. He went on to tell us that the doctors had prescribed calves' liver to so many people, that what was once cat food is now almost prohibitive in price, if indeed it can be purchased at all.

We were about to buy some veal chops and call it a day when the butcher made a suggestion. "Would you like some pork liver?" he asked.

"What's the difference between pork and calf liver?" we wanted to know.

"Twenty-five cents a pound," he declared.

"Isn't there any other difference?"

"I don't know," said the butcher. "I'm not a doctor."

So for 15 cents a pound we bought pork liver, and the wife never knew the difference. She may not live quite so long, but at least we got through the meal very nicely. It may be, of course, that calves' liver is much better for certain things. For a difference of 25 cents a pound it should be. It should cure cancer.

We're not blaming the calves, mind you, but we have decided to interview the doctors, adopting a very firm tone, and find out what it is all about. The result of the interview will be just one more reason for reading northern York county's most popular weekly.

HE NEVER TOLD A LIE

"Europe has a set of primary interests, which have to us none, or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to im-plicate ourselves, by artificial ties, in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics, or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities."

"Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalry, interest, humor, or caprice?"

the words quoted above are from the farewell address of George Washington, the hatchet-man who cut down the cherry tree and carved a place in the hearts of his countrymen.

We would add only that General Washington was an Englishman before he was an "American" . . . that he helped to found a great nation . . . and that his thoughts may be worthy of consideration by Canadians whose press gives much space to bickerings across the Atlantic.

HOLIDAZE

School's out! And we suppose there are few children—and few teachers—who regret the fact. The prospect of having two summer months with "nothing to do" is a pleasant one to anticipate. The first few weeks, if our own past experience enables us to judge accurately, are just as pleasant in reality as they were in anticipation.

After that, however, the life of doing nothing all day begins to become wearisome. The children seem to get a bit too much of it and there arises a cry of "What can we do now?"

All of which we do to support our plea for "supervised" play for the children during the summer months. To support it further, we offer you the picture of the children in the town park, playing for a few hours in the mornings and afternoons, under the supervision of someone cap-

Uxbridge Beats Aurora 4-3 In First Of Three Matches

K. Davis And L. Owrang Play Well To Take Men's Single Events

The Aurora Tennis Club suffered its first defeat of the season when it met Uxbridge here on Wednesday in the first of a three-match series. They will journey to Uxbridge for a return bout next Wednesday and if successful, it is likely that the third match will be played on the Newmarket courts.

The men's events went to Aurora on Wednesday, with Uxbridge showing up stronger in the mixed and women's events to get a 4-3 decision. Keith Davis took the men's "A" singles from B. Willis, Uxbridge, 6-4, 7-5. Lees Owrang had little trouble in taking the "B" singles, 6-1, 6-4, from B. Gold, of Uxbridge.

Owrang and Davis paired to defeat B. Willis and Bob Harris of Uxbridge, 5-7, 6-1, 6-4, in the men's "A" doubles. In the "B" doubles, however, Keith Nesbitt and "Wink" Barnard ran into difficulties after winning the first set 3-7, and lost the next two, 6-4, 6-2.

Grace Bouch, Uxbridge, defeated Audrey Grieves, 6-2, 6-3, then teamed with Mrs. E. Harris to beat Mae Fry and Connie Willis of Aurora in a close match, 6-2, 3-6, 6-2.

Tannery Gets Second Ball Win, Beating Foundry 11-7

McComb Pitches Well With Team Furnishing Fielding Support

The tannery softball team got its second win on Monday night, to tie with Sisman's for leadership in the town league. Stronger hitting enabled them to overcome the early lead taken by the foundry team to chalk up an 11-7 victory.

Whipperman, Sutton and Flintoff gave the foundry a three run lead in the first two innings and the tannery did not come into the scoring picture until the third, when Ray White blasted out a home run to bring in McComb and himself. Ferguson followed it with a three-bagger and came home on a three base hit by Smith.

The foundry scored again when Gardner came home under hits by Hadfield and Flintoff. High-light of the inning was the pinch-hitting of ten-year-old Howard Sutton, who went to bat for his father. Howard got a hit but went out on a fly.

In the first of the fourth inning, with two men out, McComb and McGhee got to bases safely and came home on Ray White's second homer. Ferguson scored on a three-base hit by "Whiff" White and the score was 7-4, with the foundry on the under side.

After a scoreless fifth inning McComb and McGhee scored with Ferguson, who uncorked a homer to make it 10-4 for the tannery. Fine pitching by McComb kept the foundry team off the scoreboard for three innings, and the pitcher went into the scoring lead for the second time in the series when he scored his fourth run of the game in the seventh.

The foundry team staged a fine come-back attempt in the last inning when Wilson, Atkinson and Yakes scored.

able of teaching them games and keeping them sanely occupied.

This picture, we believe, presents a pleasant contrast to children playing without direction, in what may be ill-assorted groups, in constant danger of street traffic, or in places that do not permit full playing room.

Cost of equipment would be low and could probably be defrayed by assessing each child a nickel—a charge that would represent a saving to parents who must pay for playthings anyway.

An instructor could be found in the ranks of our senior high school students, many of whom would enjoy the opportunity of earning a little money during the summer months. The instructor's time would not cost the council much, and though they have been burdened with many requests this year, they might entertain the idea with favor.

If not, action by a home and school club might be indicated. The Aurora Service club might find it in their power to help, or one of the many active women's groups in town might sponsor the idea. We believe it would be good for the children—and the parents, too. And it needn't cost much.

Excellent Prospects Are Seen For Good Alsike Crop In King

W. M. Cockburn Praised For Efforts In Fighting Army Worm

Agricultural Representative W. M. Cockburn was highly praised this week for his leadership in the fight against the army worm that has appeared among district field crops recently.

"You certainly have to hand it to Mr. Cockburn," Milt. McDowell told The Era on Tuesday. "He has worked hard."

Mr. McDowell had had an opportunity to view the ravages of the pest in Markham township, he said. He was optimistic in his reports of the alsike crop grown in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh concessions of King. Rain had delayed threshing the crop, however, and some farmers had been forced to turn it over several times. As much as a bushel an acre might be lost by this means, he stated. He also hinted at the possibility of the seed sprouting if it were not taken into the barns, and the wet weather continued.

He had seen farmers drawing in grain in the district around Sharon and on the Queensville flats, he said.

Why "Prejudism?"

By MURIEL THORPE

Why do we have "prejudism" among the majority of our citizens? There are a great many classes of prejudice, including racial, social and many others.

In the first place, "prejudism" is both an un-Christianlike and undemocratic fallacy. We talk peace, but how can peace be maintained if we have prejudice among our fellow men? It is not feasible, for once our Christian principles fail, unrest and trouble are inevitable.

As the youth of our country, must we stand by and listen to such remarks as, "O, he's a foreigner," or, "She's a hick." It is our duty to correct such statements if we are going to be true citizens of a democratic land.

Our fellowman, whom we class as a "foreigner" or a "hick" is not going to feel as kindly toward us if spoken of thus. And he cannot be reprimanded, for it is ourselves who need correcting. These people will not be inclined to work and strive for the welfare of their country, unless they are better treated.

"Oh," someone says, "why worry, they are so few." Maybe, but speaking of our so-called "foreigner" and "hick" or as one should say, our friends from other lands and farmers, our country could not thrive without these two classes.

Firstly, our citizens from other countries do labor that we Canadians refuse to do, yet it is labor which is necessary. And then, can any country prosper without its farmers? Absolutely not, for they are the backbone of the country.

So may we as citizens forget our prejudices and be as the poem, "A House By The Side Of The Road," suggests "a friend to man" regardless of whom that man may be.

LIGHTING SYSTEM OF TENNIS COURT ADMIRER BY MANY

Shirley Fingold Given Trophy As Juvenile Tennis Champ

A record crowd greeted the sparkling play shown by tennis aces brought to the local courts on Thursday night to help celebrate the installation of the Aurora Tennis Club's new lighting system.

The visiting players were Phil Pearson, Canadian junior singles champion, who, with Bill Pedlar also has the Ontario doubles championship to his credit, and Maurice Margesson and Grant McLean, northern Ontario doubles champions.

"A few weeks ago the lighting system was just a dream," stated Keith Davis, who acted as master of ceremonies. "But by the co-operation of the town council, town electricians and members of the club, it is now a reality."

Mr. Davis introduced Morgan Baker, M. L. A., Mayor Dr. C. R. Boulding, Reeve J. A. Knowles, Deputy-Reeve C. A. Malloy and Councillors Dr. E. J. Henderson, Lorne C. Lee and C. E. Sparks.

Credit for the idea of lighting the courts for night play was given to Rev. Dr. E. J. Thompson. Dr. C. J. Devins was called on to present a handsome trophy to Shirley Fingold, 12-year-old winner of the girls' juvenile tournament.

Dr. Boulding was then asked

Two Killed In Vandorf Railway Crossing Accident

Archie Greenwood, Mrs. Edith Burroughs Killed In Crash

Mrs. Edith Burroughs and Archie Greenwood, both of Whitchurch, were instantly killed on Tuesday night at the C.N.R. crossing near Pine Orchard on the fifth concession, when the car in which they were driving was smashed by the "Northland Express."

Fragments of the car were strewn 400 yards down the track and the bodies were so mangled as to make identification difficult. J. Elliott, engineer of the train, got in touch with the police and Constables Aubrey Fleury, Jack Williamson and Ronald Watt investigated. Dr. C. J. Devins, Aurora, has ordered an inquest.

Mr. Greenwood had taken the car, with his housekeeper, Mrs. Burroughs, away from the farm at about 8 o'clock in the evening with the intention of calling at a chicken ranch near Wilcox Lake. Fifteen minutes later the

CITIZENS' BAND GOES TO JACKSON'S POINT

A dance band, made up from members of the Aurora Citizens' Band, are going to Jackson's Point on Saturday to help entertain at a picnic being given for the young folk at the golf club there.

Though there is no warning at the crossing other than the usual "crossing" sign, Mr. Greenwood was familiar with the district and had probably made the same crossing many times before. Friends, therefore, are unable to explain his failure to notice the approaching train.

Six children, ranging in age from five to 16 years are left to loo after a 200-acre farm.

Sympathy is felt throughout the community for the children of Mr. Greenwood, and at the investigation of Mrs. F. Prosser, their grandmother, efforts are being made to reach their mother, who left them some years ago.

Mendelssohn Choir To Be Invited Back In October

Invitation Suggests Sharing Both Expenses And Proceeds

A special meeting of the jubilee association was called on Tuesday night of this week to consider a proposal that the Mendelssohn choir be invited for a return engagement in the Aurora arena in the early fall.

Several officials of the choir had suggested they would be glad to return to Aurora, it was learned. The performance this spring had been a great success musically, it was felt, the acoustics of the rink enabling the listeners to enjoy the music thoroughly. Both the weather and the season had worked against a full attendance, however.

Under the terms of the invitation extended to the choir, the town and choir will share equally in expenses and in net proceeds.

The plan met with the unanimous approval of those present and Hugh Bowman was asked to extend the invitation under the conditions which had been drawn up. If the invitation is accepted it is expected the choir will appear in Aurora on the first Monday in October.

The town's reputation as a community that "did things" was

KING ARLEANE CARSON WEDS JOHN CLIFT

On Thursday a presentation was held in Lasky hall in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Finch and Mr. and Mrs. Boys. There was a program and dancing. The community presented Mr. and Mrs. Finch with a living-room table and Mr. and Mrs. Boys with a small table and sherry glasses.

The community extend their deepest sympathy to Mrs. Ivan Follitt and family in the loss of a husband and father and to Mr. Pike and family of Weston, formerly of King City, in the loss of a wife and mother.

Several of the young people of King City Y. P. U. attended the Presbytery picnic at Sharon last Wednesday.

The King City Y. P. U. made a tour of a big chocolate factory on Thursday and then had a picnic supper at Sunnyside Beach. A great deal was learned by all. Misses Beatrice and Arlett Whaley of Winnipeg are spending two weeks at the home of their aunt, Mrs. H. Hambly of King City.

Mrs. Clarke of Uxbridge, Mrs. Walter Rolling's mother, is spending a short while with her. A pretty garden wedding took place quietly at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Carson last Wednesday, when their younger daughter, Arleane Marguerite, became the bride of John Clift, son of Mrs. S. Clift and the late Mr. Clift of Aurora. Rev. Douglas G. Davis officiated.

The bride was escorted by her father to an archway of green cedar and orange marigolds and banked with baskets of daphniums and phlox. The bride's only sister, Mrs. Ewart Patton, played the wedding music.

The bride wore a gown of sheer orchid, with bolero jacket and sash of matching taffeta. The neckline was V-shaped and the skirt slightly bouffant. In her hair was a simple circlet of orange blossoms and for flowers she chose a corsage of pastel shade sweet peas. She wore a rhinestone bracelet, the gift of the groom.

The bridesmaid was Miss Lillian Leese of Lowville, formerly of King City. For her costume she wore a soft turquoise organza with ruffled bolero, white hat and white accessories, and a corsage of pastel shade sweet peas. Jack Mark of Toronto supported the groom.

A reception for the immediate family was held on the lawn following the ceremony. The bride's mother wore black and white, crepe with white accessories and a corsage of Johanna Hill roses. The groom's mother wore grey flowered chiffon with white accessories and wore a corsage of Johanna Hill roses.

For travelling the bride donned a smart green sharkskin dress and white flannel coat, with white accessories. The bride couple left to spend their honeymoon at Wasaga Beach. The bride is a talented violinist and actively interested in King City United church.

EVERSLEY NAIL STORM HITS SOUTH EVERSLEY

The community is glad to hear that Mrs. Mesley has been home from the hospital, where she underwent an emergency operation, for a couple of weeks and has made a good recovery.

The hail storm of Friday night did considerable damage to gardens at the south of Eversley, King City and Eversley north were not hit by it, but around O'Rafferty's corners, tomato plants and cucumbers were badly broken in some gardens. Mr. Goodwin and family visiting at Scots Wha Hae on Sunday, from Toronto, reported fields of corn flattened down by hail stones the size of birds' eggs which came pelting down for several minutes.

Mrs. James Ball visited her nephew, Harry Heath, over the weekend. Mr. Heath is electrician at a big manufacturing plant at Meriton. He lived here for some years and his friends are glad to hear of him, his wife and little daughter, Judith Ruth.

Some farmers go for a holiday between haying and harvest. Mr. Roy Follitt, his wife and daughter Edna, and his brother, Clifford, took a motor trip, tourist fashion, last week. In three days they motored 500 miles, going to Montreal. They saw an ocean liner, viewed the city from the river and from Mount Royal. Clifford thinks the city very beautiful and is charmed with the old world narrow streets, high houses and the many more modern, beautiful buildings.

One of the local girls, Miss Arleane Carson, who lives between Eversley and King, but really belongs to King, was married last Wednesday at her home to Mr. Jack Clift of Aurora. Arleane has been one of King Central's telephone operators. A short time ago, Miss Egan from the same central married Roy Hollingshead, and previous to that, her sister married Duncan Thompson. All the telephone girls seem to get married.

Eversley Young People's held their July picnic at Bayview on Tuesday. There was a good crowd and they had a good day. They crowded into a bus for the trip. Everyone is thankful for the showers which saved the berry crop.

On Wednesday afternoon the W.M.S. held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Art Bova, Eversley. There was a good attendance and after the business and program, a bale of clothing was packed for the supply department. There were several splendid quilts included.

The jubilee sunshine quilt was purchased by Mrs. Jennie Tawse Shropshire. Members are glad this memorial of 50 years of service should be in the keeping of one of the Tawse family, the founders of the Eversley church. Mrs. Lyle Wells gave the scripture portion by reciting 1 Cor. 13, the love chapter. Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Shropshire contributed readings.

OVER THE AIR

By GOLDEN GLOW

Those of us who were fortunate enough to be able to listen in to the overseas broadcast last Friday morning, commencing at 8.30 over CBL from the British Broadcasting Corporation, could not fail to be impressed. It was world-wide, for it was the dedication ceremonies of the Australian war memorial on the spot near Amiens, where so many brave men of that country lie in unmarked graves. Villers Bretonneux where so many Australians paid the last sacrifice, but where they so gloriously pushed the German hordes back in the third battle of the Somme. Villers Bretonneux, Amiens, Cambrai and St. Quentin. Can we ever forget these names?

But last Friday, while King George VI and Queen Elizabeth were on their visit to France, during the royal progress, they, with President Albert Le Brun of France unveiled and dedicated the Australian war memorial before thousands of "pilgrims" and troops from all parts of the British commonwealth of nations and France.

The broadcast came over perfectly and the ceremony was most impressive. After the dedicatory prayers and the unveiling, the Last Post was sounded, then a salvo of 21 guns followed by Reveille. With the bands playing martial music and the crowds cheering and the announcer describing the scene, you felt as if you were really present; and when they sang O Valiant Heart, to band accompaniment, you felt as if we here in Canada were in reality a part of the ceremony, it all seemed so close at hand.

ARCHIBALD CLAN ENJOYS REUNION

The second annual reunion of the Archibald clan was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Egan of Bolton on Saturday, July 16, with 150 members present from various parts of Ontario and as far distant as Red Deer, Alta.

A sumptuous lunch, followed by ice-cream, was served on the school grounds, after which the president, David Archibald, of Dunkerton, gave a short address and Dr. Pinkerton of King City proposed the toast to the king.

Rev. Harry Bartlett proposed the toast to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Archibald, of King, the oldest couple of the clan, which was responded to by Charles London, reeve of Toronto Gore. Mr. Archibald was presented with a birthday cake by Miss Ruby Evans of Cookstown; a package of dates, of which he is very fond, was also given him by Miss Blanche Wellesley and Miss Helen Bartlett presented Mrs. Archibald with a bouquet of flowers.

These presentations were all made by granddaughters. Mr. Archibald celebrated his 85th birthday recently. Miss Birdie Evans also received a bouquet of flowers from Miss Joan Hoover, Master Douglas Burger of Barrie received a rattle from Mrs. Wm. Evans for being the youngest member. Charles Archibald of King spoke a few words of thanks and George McClure of Red Deer, Alta., spoke a few words of greeting on behalf of the Archibalds of Alberta to the Archibalds of Ontario.

A minute's silence was observed in respect for those who had passed on since the last picnic.

Sports followed, including various races for everyone, with prizes for the winners, followed by a softball tournament.

A short business meeting was held, and the following officers elected: hon. pres., Charles Archibald; pres., David Archibald; vice-pres., Ed. Archibald; treasurer, Arthur Wellesley; secretary, Mrs. Clark Archibald; press reporter, Mrs. Wm. Hollingshead.

PICKING CHERRIES

By DELPHINIUM

The easiest way to reach those fine big ripe cherries on the top-most boughs is to be like the birds, fly to them. I note the flocks of birds which are clearing up those cherries we could not reach, or those we left till later to become more ripe. Goodbye to all left over from last week.

Isn't picking cherries fun? Well, maybe so! Try it on our trees. The branches wave high in the air, out from the centre of the tree. You cannot reach many if you climb and the branches are brittle and break easily. So they must be reached by step ladders or other ladders.

You know the Scotch song "Ziller Herin," where the fish wife sings "Ye may ca' them vulgar farin' wives and mither's maist despairin', ca' them lives o' men." So, with sour cherries. Low in price; good in a pie; too acid to eat many of them, but they look so inviting and are really very acceptable. But, you take your life in your hands when you try picking them. I know, for I was hung up in a cherry tree one day last week.

The high step ladder had only about one inch hold on the tree and I was on the top, with one arm around a branch, treading the smaller branches toward me, and picking with the other hand. A strong wind was blowing. As I turned for a fruit-laden branch, some distance away, the wind freshened, down went the ladder, and I was suspended by the left arm caught in a crotch in the tree. Help wasn't far away, but I hollered till he became aware that I wasn't fooling. I had to lift myself by catching hold of another branch by my right hand to raise that left arm from its too firm hold, before I could let my feet down to terra firma. However, I was picking cherries again the next day, using a ladder and a light garden rake, but realized that cherries are expensive no matter how you pick them.

SHARON

INSTITUTE PICNIC IS GRAND SUCCESS

A very enjoyable day was spent last Thursday when the Sharon W. I. entertained their husbands and families at a picnic at Midhurst park.

Especially enjoyable to both young and old was the ball game between the married men and the married women. Some of those taking part could not recall playing ball since they were in school. The score was 9-8 in favor of the men.

The program committee had a full list of contests, games and races. Prizes were given. The honeymoon race was most enjoyed. Two delicious meals were served by the ladies.

Everyone present was of the opinion that a picnic for husbands and families should be held by the institute again next year.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ramsay and Master Bob, from Egerton, Alta., are visiting relatives in and around Sharon.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Ramsay from Streetsville also visited in Sharon on Sunday.

Mrs. M. Shaw, Miss Nora Shaw and Robert Shaw spent Tuesday at Warminster and Beaverton.

Miss Joyce Tate is visiting Mrs. Fletcher in Whitby.

Mrs. Fry, Howard, Jean and Donna are holidaying at Manitoulin Island with Mrs. D. Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hillaby and Douglas are spending a week near Port Huron, Mich.

Mrs. Ash of Unionville spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ash.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Dankert and Phillip are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Brown, Mrs. Clarence Long, Joan and Clarwin of Orillia spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. Brown.

Service at the United church will be at the usual time on Sunday next, 7.30 p.m. Sunday-school is at 10 a.m.

Mrs. Parker and Mr. and Mrs. R. Black are visiting relatives at Dorset, Ont.

The rich young man approached the girl's father with some misgivings.

"Er—er, I suppose, sir," he began, nervously, "that you are aware I have been making advances to your daughter?"

Father patted him on the back. "Yes, and now what about her poor old dad, eh?"

THE OSTREKOFF JEWELS

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

A GREAT NOVEL OF LOVE AND ADVENTURE

INSTALLMENT 21
The Princess in Person

Mr. Raydon Haskell was of all his craft in London, Paris or Rome, the dandy of fashionable jewelers. He was a thin, cadaverous-looking man of elegant appearance. His linen was always faultless, his nails almost too perfectly manicured. At the time when his manager telephoned to Felix Drayton he was seated in his private office, slightly raised above the level of the shop, his famous magnifying glass in his eye and an emerald poised delicately between his fingers.

After a minute examination he laid the latter down upon the little stretch of black velvet spread out before him and transferred his regard to his visitor. She, too, was in her way unusual, but certainly less distinguished. She was dressed in the habiliments of moderate woe—that is to say, her completely black attire indicated a loss which was probably nuptial, but it was toned down to some degree by the concealing hand of fashion. She had the air of one who had come upon a pleasant errand. Her manner was complacent and devoid of all suggestion of haste.

"If you do not care to buy the stone," Mr. Haskell said, "I thought you might possibly be kind enough to give me some idea of its value, in case I should be disposed to advance upon it the sum of which my friend is in need. I do not, as a rule, interest myself in this sort of thing," she went on, "but I like people. I am always anxious to help them."

"The stone is interesting," Mr. Haskell admitted, "and certainly valuable. It is one of those cases, however, in which, notwithstanding Your Ladyship's sponsorship, we should require to know the actual owner of the stone."

"As a matter of curiosity—why?" his visitor asked.

Mr. Haskell smiled cryptically. "In the jeweler's world," he explained, "strange things happen sometimes. Now this stone, for instance, has been set in a very remarkable fashion. I should think without a doubt it came from Russia."

"It may have done," the woman conceded. "I like it so much that, if I could afford to, I should probably buy it myself. If I cannot induce you to do so, I would not object to making it up for me. I suppose?"

"Certainly not, my Lady," was the prompt reply. "Bring it to me as your own property and I promise that I will make you a marvellous pendant."

"And the value of the stone?" The jeweler looked thoughtfully through those high windows down into his elegant showroom. His friend, Felix Drayton, had just arrived and, with a younger man, was inspecting some cigarette cases. He continued his interview with deliberation, however. There might still be business coming to the firm, and even if the jewel were stolen property, Sir William Bott had been a financier of repute, and his widow never showed the least objection to spending his money.

"It is difficult to say," he temporized. "If it were offered to me with a definite history behind it, and if it were approved by my gem expert, I should be prepared to give $5000 for it."

The woman lifted it up and looked at it lovingly. Somehow, in her pudgy fingers, it seemed a less exquisite possession.

"Put it in a box, will you, please," she enjoined. "I'll carry it in my bag here and you must please send one of your assistants out to the car with me. Other people's property, you know! I'm always nervous with other people's property. My own jewels are insured and I take my risk with them at any time."

Mr. Haskell carefully wrapped the stone in cotton wool, placed it in a box, and dropped it into his customer's handbag. He walked through the showrooms with her and apparently neglected to salute his friend, Felix Drayton. He himself crossed the pavement and handed her into her car.

"If you decide to buy the jewel from your friend, my Lady," he said, "we would be proud to handle the setting of it."

"I'm not likely to go anywhere else," she assured him. "Sir William always declared that he had absolute confidence in you and your people."

The car drove off. Mr. Haskell joined his friend.

"You don't need to worry with any of your ailments so far as that lady is concerned, Felix," he remarked. "Lady Bott, her name is. Her husband was a city knight and though he wasn't a millionaire, she's good for what she cares to buy. Some dandy as usual, of course. She's offering the jewel for a friend and won't tell her name. They always go about their business that way. You'll have to find out where her ladyship plays cards and the rest ought to be easy."

"You think that it was one of the Ostrekoff stones?" Felix Drayton asked.

"It's a Russian stone, anyway," was the cautious reply, "and, from all the descriptions I've ever seen of the Ostrekoff jewels, it's one of them."

"You didn't buy it, of course?" "Not I," the jeweler answered. "I only deal with owners."

"A young friend of mine, Mr. Wilfred Haven," Felix Drayton remarked, introducing his companion, "delighted," the jeweler murmured, "is your father Norman Haven, may I ask?"

"He is," the other assented.

Mr. Haskell sighed.

"He once bought a tiara from me," he confided. "We don't get many such customers nowadays."

He turned away with a little nod of farewell. Felix Drayton led his companion across the street into a famous cocktail bar. They seated themselves in two easy chairs. The solicitor gave an order, then went in search of the telephone box. He returned in a few minutes.

"Lady Bott's club is the Alpha," he announced. "I shall have a man playing there this evening and a list of her principal associates in the morning. I only hope it will help us. I'm not very sanguine. I somehow feel that as your friend had the courage to bring off a coup like this, she'd want to dispose of the lot at once—get hold of a million or so and close up. I can't see her dealing out jewels piecemeal, every one with a clue attached to it. By the by, I suppose there's no doubt that she did go off from Cromer with the goods?"

"None whatever," Haven admitted, a little sadly. "She bought a few clothes and a trunk in Cromer, and the young woman who helped her with her things when she left fetched the belt and satchel from my locker and saw her pack them."

"She did stay around for a day or two, didn't she?" Haven nodded.

"They told me that she stayed until she was assured that I was in no further danger. They may have told me that just so as not to hurt my feelings too much. I can't tell. Of course, to make a complete confession," Haven went on, a little dubiously, "she also went away with a very penny I had in the world. That, however, was insignificant—a few hundred dollars and some Polish notes."

"How did she get at those?" Felix Drayton asked.

"They were loose in the pocket of my overcoat which was hanging in the cupboard where my belt and satchel had been placed. It was a locker, for my personal use only, and I would have had the key of it if I had been conscious. Of course, you must remember," Haven went on, "that the satchel was supposed to have contained papers—that was what it was made for—and the belt too was stuffed with paper all round. You could scarcely expect any one at the nursing home to legislate for a patient with $5,000,000 worth of jewels in his possession."

"I quite see that," Felix Drayton meditated. "Things seem to have worked out amazingly well for that young lady. I would give a very great deal," he added, "to catch just a momentary glimpse of her. Your descriptions aren't very convincing."

Just at that moment Felix Drayton's wish was granted, for Anna Kastellane herself walked in.

For an appreciable space of time, Haven was like a boxer taking the count, insensible and insentient. He sat grasping the arms of his chair, gazing across at the little circle of modish-looking men and women among whom Anna Kastellane was seated. There was not the slightest manner of doubt concerning her identity, nor, he reflected with a curious pang, was there the slightest manner of doubt, but that she had swept past him into the room without a gesture of recognition, without the slightest sign of ever having seen him before. The amazement of it almost took his breath away. A few weeks ago they had faced murder in each other's company and had thrown their victims from the clouds into oblivion. They had harnessed life and death to the fury of their emotions and fought in a joint cause like primitive human beings. Now, a few yards away after one casual glance at him, she was laughing up into the face of one of her attendant cavaliers.

"Really dry," she begged. "No Italian and no bitters." Every nerve of his body began to twitch with the desire for action. His earlier conceptions had been correct. He knew her now for what she was. This was the girl who had made him break his trust, who had escaped almost incredible perils with his aid, then left him unconscious and absconded with the jewels for which he had risked his life. His eyes dilated as he gazed across the room. This girl, with her low musical laugh and her scornful indifference to his existence, was the creature whom he had dragged screaming with fear from a brothel. Felix Drayton pressed a glass into his hand.

"Drink this," he suggested pleasantly, "and we'll see about a spot of lunch. Never mind about those people. We'll talk about them presently. They won't melt away."

Haven was in a subjective state. He allowed himself to be led up stairs and ensconced by his companion in a retired corner. Well away from the bar and its atmosphere, the latter ventured upon a few plain words.

"We don't want to go at this affair of yours bull-headed," he said. "There's more in it than appears upon the surface. The girl would never have attempted a bluff like that if she hadn't either great confidence in you or if she wasn't pretty hard pressed."

"You know who it was then?" Drayton nodded.

"How could I help it?" he remarked dryly. "It's my job to study expressions."

"Perhaps you know who the others were?"

"Certainly I do. That's what makes it all the more interesting. I can't tell you how glad I am you came to me. If you weren't a millionaire, I wouldn't charge you a penny for this case. I'm so interested in it. We'll just order lunch and I'll tell you who your young friend's companions are."

The function was duly performed and Felix Drayton added a few words in the maître d'hôtel's ear. "I just told him," he explained, as he leaned back in his seat, "not to put those others near us. They wouldn't be likely to, anyway, because this isn't the popular end of the room."

"Who are they?" Haven demanded. "Well, the dark, elegant-looking young man is Boris Roussky, who was once in the Russian Embassy here and who was sent over at the beginning of the Revolution to try and create friendly feeling with the new regime. The stout man with the black beard is Serge Melgounoff."

He is a Russian of a different type—a great shipping man. I must confess that I don't know much about him or what he stands for. The languid lady with the beautiful eyes and sables is his wife. The pale young man with the face of an Archbishop is the Grand Duke Peter—one of the heirs to the throne, if anything should happen to the Romanoffs."

"What on earth is Anna Kastellane doing in that crowd?" Haven exclaimed.

"She might easily have found her way there," Felix Drayton pointed out, "if my surmises connected with her are correct. I'm afraid that you'll have to make up your mind that your young lady friend is a spy—a very scheming young person. Indeed, as such, she might easily be connected with the two Russians—Roussky and Melgounoff. What they're all doing with Peter, though, one cannot imagine. There are explanations, of course, very simple ones. Even if the revolution in Russia fades out, I think, the Romanoffs would have to go."

"This is all very well," Haven broke in, "but what about the Ostrekoff jewels? I'm terrified to death that at any moment Elisaveta Ostrekoff may arrive to claim them. Can't you approach this young woman at once and find out at least where we stand?"

"That would mean changing our tactics a little," Felix Drayton mused. "Your idea, then, would be to accost this young lady, accuse her of having stolen the jewels and demand their return."

Haven winced, but he stuck it out. "Well, why can't we do that, anyway?" he insisted.

Felix Drayton continued his lunch for a moment in silence. "I suppose we could," he admitted. "And if you wish it, I will. It certainly is the most obvious course. On the other hand, it seemed to me that there was more than one mystery connected with the young woman's desertion of you at Cromer and the theft of the jewels."

"There certainly was that," Haven agreed. "But if you let her walk away now, what are you going to do when Elisaveta Ostrekoff comes along?"

Felix Drayton smiled. "I can assure you, Mr. Haven," he said, "I do not neglect the A, B, C of my profession in thinking out its finer ramifications. The young woman will not be able to move a step, enter a house, a shop or a restaurant without our knowledge until I call my men off."

"But you haven't even been to the telephone since we came across here," Haven observed doubtfully.

"The telephone," his companion expounded, "is the most obvious of all devices. You didn't happen, perhaps, to see me shake hands with a man who was lounging about at the top of the stairs? Anyhow, that was quite sufficient. Your young lady friend is just as safely ours as though she were locked up, and we have the additional advantage of knowing what she's going to do."

"Delicious sole, that. Have a little more of the sauce? Here come our friends. You see, they are going to sit at the other end of the room. Well, I can foretell the result of their luncheon party. There will be even more cocktails, there will be vodka with the caviare, there will be powerful Rhine wines, champagne to follow and then old brandy. It will make no difference. They will never move Peter. Where I stay I rest! Peter has no fancy for an uneasy crown. The Romanoffs are finished, and with them goes all hope of a dynasty. Tell me, Mr. Haven—you must have formed some idea while she was with you—for whom is Anna Kastellane working? What does she want out of all this destination of these jewels if we allowed her to keep them?"

"We're not going to allow her to keep them," Haven said firmly. "If Anna Kastellane had disappeared off the face of the earth, I was quite prepared to carry out my word and hand over the $5,000,000 to Elisaveta Ostrekoff, but with Anna Kastellane here in possession of the jewels, I naturally shan't do anything of the sort. They are the property of Elisaveta Ostrekoff and our business—yours, too, Drayton—is to see that she has them."

"Oh, she'll have them all right, in the end. I'll promise you that," Felix Drayton declared. "There may be a little more bloodshed, there may be even a few more undiscovered crimes before she comes into her own, but finally she'll have them. I should very much like to know what sort of a young woman we are to expect in Miss Elisaveta Ostrekoff."

"If she takes after her mother," Haven confided, "she is one of the most charming women in the world."

"Well," he observed, "it's queer how little reliance there is to be placed on Russian consanguinity." Felix Drayton nodded thoughtfully and helped himself to a cutlet. Other people besides Wilfred Haven turned their heads and forgot to look away when, a few minutes later, a young woman with two companions was ushered into the restaurant. Beautiful girls were, rather the rule than the exception at the embassy, but her beauty was of an unusual type. Her hair, even in the shadowy room, was yellow as corn. Her eyes were dark and deeply set. Her lips were parted with an almost childish interest as she glanced around. With her came an elderly woman with something of a presence, although her clothes were simple and unfashionable, and, following them, an elderly man with gray hair and mustache and a military bearing, one of that not uncommon type whose clothes and tout ensemble seem equally well preserved. Marlo himself conducted them, with outstretched hand, to the most desirable of the remaining tables and Haven gave a long-drawn sigh, which was almost a gasp, as she sat down.

"A very beautiful young woman," Felix Drayton remarked, "and a stranger, I think, to all of us. I have seen the old man about at intervals for the last twenty years. He was one of the earliest Russian refugees—Colonel Ollastransky his name is. But the girl—she is not only wonderful, but she is unusual. I never saw such coloring."

"But what is more remarkable still," Haven confided, "starting across at her in dazed fashion, 'Is that, except that she is taller, she is the image of the Princess. I never thought that I should see hair and eyes like that again.'"

"The Princess who?" "The Princess who with her husband is responsible for my trust. The Princess Ostrekoff, the mother of the girl for whom we are searching—Elisaveta Ostrekoff."

Felix Drayton lost his appearance of complete imperturbability. He glanced across the room. The entrance of the newcomers seemed to have created no comment among Anna Kastellane and her friends. "It would be a queer coincidence," Drayton meditated, "if this should turn out to be the young lady of whom we are in search. Perhaps we had better hope that it isn't. To be asked to produce the jewels at a moment's notice might be embarrassing."

Haven shuddered. "This decides me, Mr. Drayton," he said. "Some of your suggestions have been interesting but they're too dangerous. While we wait, the Ostrekoff jewels may be slipping away. You must approach Anna Kastellane before she leaves this place. If necessary," he added, "I will go with you."

Felix Drayton's faint air of discomposure became more pronounced. His brilliant little eyes kept wandering from the distant table where Anna Kastellane sat with her friends to the nearer one, where the new arrivals were engaged in ordering their luncheon. He sighed.

"In my profession," he confided to Haven, "one hates to have one's theories upset. Look at the young lady again."

"She is adorable to look at," Haven agreed; "but I've seen all I want of her for the moment until I have the jewels back. If that isn't Elisaveta Ostrekoff I'm surely going to get the surprise of my life. Her eyes and the setting of them are her mother's; so is the color of her hair and a little trick she has of throwing back her head every now and then. Drayton," he went on, with a groan, "if we were anywhere near the door, I can see myself creeping out on all fours. It's a terrible mess to be in, this—after all one's been through, too."

"It appears to me," Felix Drayton confessed, "very much as though you were right concerning the identity of the young woman."

Marlo, the manager, who had been talking to the new arrivals, came smilingly across the room. He little knew what a bombshell he carried in his hand. Arrived at their table, he bowed to Felix Drayton.

"Mr. Drayton," he remarked, "you have the good fortune, as always. The most beautiful young lady who has entered my restaurant this season is inquiring about you. Her dame de compagnie and guardian tell me that they have brought her from abroad to see you. They called at your office, it appears, this morning, and were told that you would probably be lunching here. Madame suggests that you pay your respects."

"They came in, then, without being members," Felix Drayton observed, as he rose to his feet. "The fact was pointed out to me," Marlo admitted, "but what can one do when divinity shines upon us? The young lady can be an honorary member of my club for life if she wishes."

"And her name?" Haven intervened eagerly.

Marlo leaned a little farther over the table.

"The Princess Elisaveta Ostrekoff," he confided.

PUBLIC KNOWS
LAW - DR. DALES

Larger speed limit signs will be put up at the entrances to the town, on the suggestion of Councilor A. V. Higginson.

"It is not fair to have small signs that people cannot see and then to summons them for speeding," said Mr. Higginson at the town council meeting a week ago Monday evening.

"The law is the same all over Ontario," said Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales. "They know what the speed limit is. There is no persecution here. We are blamed for cases from other municipalities. But we are not going to allow people to get away with unreasonable speeds. We will issue enough summonses to make them careful."

MANY owners say a new G-E Refrigerator saves enough money each month to pay its own cost. They calculate it saves up to 20% on perishable food bills. Figure out what that would mean to you. Keeping food fresh in a G-E Refrigerator enables you to buy in quantities at week-end bargain prices. It prevents waste by preserving "left-overs". It uses so little current and the upkeep cost is almost nothing. Don't think you're being economical by doing without a G-E Refrigerator. It's much more thrifty to have one.

Queensville Y.P.U. held a very successful "roast" in Longford Pegg's park last Tuesday night. Everyone looked forward to lots of hot dogs and marshmallows. However, at the appointed hour to leave for the site, it was found that the winners had not arrived.

VANDORF INSTITUTE MEETS AT SUMMER HOME

Only 14 ladies attended the Institute meeting held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Walton last Wednesday afternoon, and those who were not there missed a real treat.

Mr. and Mrs. Walton are a very gracious host and hostess and the visit to their home is one of the highlights for the institute this year.

The business meeting was held on the spacious verandah, the president presiding. After singing the opening ode, the institute creed was given by Mrs. Willis. The roll call, "Historical Events," brought to mind happenings in the Vandorf community and elsewhere.

Mrs. J. A. VanNostrand recalled the fire that destroyed the hall, sending sparks to the roof of her own home and causing considerable excitement. Mrs. Arthur VanNostrand told of her experience of living in the path of the tornado that swept across that part of Vandorf some few years ago, destroying buildings and uprooting trees.

Mrs. Moynihan told of Kettleby as she knew it in her school days. Mrs. Cale told of her experience and that of the other members of her family, also her uncle's family at the time of the Chicago fire in 1871. Everyone had heard of the Chicago fire, but Mrs. Cale's story made it seem very real.

Mr. Walton then spoke of the early history of Kettleby, how it rose to a thriving little village, and then, when the industries went to larger centres, Kettleby settled down to the quiet little place it now is—a lovely little village among the hills.

In speaking of the early days Mr. Walton paid great tribute to the country doctor with his horse and two-wheeled gig in summer, and sleigh in winter, going through all kinds of roads, very different from modern conveyances and roads. Mr. Walton paid loving tribute to his father and mother and it is to their memory that he is keeping the old house in the loveliness it now stands.

The spacious lawn is surrounded by lovely flower beds and is the playground of the children of the village, who must feel as Institute members did, that there is a sacredness about the place one cannot help but feel, for they never abuse the privileges.

The large dining-room table was set and everyone sat down to a delicious lunch and enjoyed the social time so much they were loathe to leave.

Before leaving each one signed her name in the guest register. This meeting was one that will linger long in the minds of those who had the privilege of attending.

SUTTON VISITORS DEFEAT LOCAL TEAM 26-1

The second lacrosse game to take place in the Sutton arena gave the visiting Mimico Mountaineers an overwhelming victory of 26-1 when they played before a good crowd on Monday night.

The visitors, a well-coached team, had most of the play as the score attests. The home team showed plenty of aggressive spirit but lacked finishing in and around the net. They missed on several chances that looked like certain counters and though outplayed, they looked well in defeat.

Mimico scored seven in the first stanza, five in the second as well as in the third canto, and finished up by tallying on nine occasions. Carson Fairbairn scored Sutton's only goal on a shot from close in, in the dying moments of the third period, but although the locals put on a strong offensive, they could not beat the clever Mimico goalie.

Sutton's team showed a marked improvement over their last appearance against Orangeville here.

WILL MAKE WAR ON SPEEDERS
Several extra constables have been assigned for Sunday duty

ARMY WORM'S ENEMIES GROW

While a few minor cases of army worm have been found in the Newmarket and Aurora districts, the most infestations as reported and investigated by W. M. Cockburn, agricultural representative, are in Markham township, on the Richmond Hill-Maple road and a two-mile strip across the south end of Whitechurch township. A number of very bad cases have been treated, applying the poison bran mixture referred to in last week's issue and excellent results obtained. In a few cases where only full grown worms were present, large numbers have now pupated and are dormant.

Early grain is being harvested and in some cases poisoned bran is being broadcast around the fields or stocks to prevent the pest from spreading to adjoining fields of late grain or corn. Several "bees" have been supervised by the representative during the past week with willing neighbors turning out in dozens to help their less fortunate friends. As the worms ordinarily only eat at night, and prefer their "bran mash" fresh, the poison bait is not put out until after six o'clock in the evening.

The adult moths, similar to that of the cutworm, lay their eggs on spring grain and grasses and the worms which appear in about ten days devour the green leaves of grasses, grains and corn, cut off the heads of wheat and barley and nip off the heads or individual seeds of the grain. In the daytime, unless cloudy, these worms hide in the soil, under lumps, stones, leaves or lodged grain and their presence is most easily detected by the greenish sawdust-like droppings on the ground, the bare stalks from which the leaves have been eaten, and the trimmed heads or the grain on the ground.

The worm is dark gray to dirty black with yellowish stripes down the back. After feeding for three to four weeks, they enter the soil to pupate, which makes people think they have disappeared. The pupa (cocoon) is dark brown, 1 1/2 to 3" long and rather bullet-shaped.

In two weeks the pupa turns into a light brown colored moth with a small white spot on each of the front wings. These immediately proceed to lay their eggs for the next generation which is usually almost completely destroyed by its enemies.

The present outbreak of the army worm pest is a repetition of the ones in 1896 and 1914 and it is hoped history will repeat itself again so that our farmers might be spared this trouble for another quarter century. People have been inclined to blame this outbreak on many causes which did not exist at the time of the former plagues. As a matter of fact, these "guesses" are wrong. These worms are to be found in very small numbers every year but when their natural enemies are a failure, so to speak, the army worm temporarily becomes a plague.

Within the past week, according to Mr. Cockburn, these natural enemies of the worms have shown evidence of rapid increase, including the Tachina fly, which lays its parasitic eggs on the backs of the worms and the Braconid fly, which lays its eggs inside the body of the army worm. This latter fly is responsible for the little snow white clusters of tiny egg-like cocoons found under the lodged grain, weeds, etc., in army worm infested fields. These parasitic flies, ground beetles, sparrows and starlings give hope that nature is aiding science in bringing the worms under control.

The Lennox memorial picnic, carried on by Clifford Case, Aurora, since the death of the former member, Col. T. Herbert Lennox, was almost dropped this year. Officials of the party decided, however, to carry on, and have announced it for Monday at Jackson's Point.

Speakers are billed as follows: Hon. Earl Rowe, M.P.; Hon. Leopold Macaulay, M. L. A.; Cecil Frost, new president, Ontario Conservative party; Hon. G. S. Henry, M. L. A.; Col. George Drew, K. C.; Senator Mrs. Ina C. Fallis, Peterboro.

J. E. Nesbitt is president and Arleigh Armstrong is secretary of the organization.

DRIVER IS NOT BLAMED
The coroner's jury, investigating the death of Peter Taylor, 9, of Oshawa, which occurred on July 15 at Willow Beach, brought in a verdict of accidental death at Sutton on Saturday. The jury took an hour to come to a decision and absolved the driver, Fred Arthur Smith of Beaverton, of all blame. N. L. Mathews of Newmarket appeared for the crown and Dr. O. M. Beattie of Sutton was the coroner. David Treloar of Sutton was foreman of the jury.

OPERATOR IS AWAY
Mr. and Mrs. George Thompson and their baby daughter are away on holidays. Frank Moyer, Brantford, has been relieving Mr. Thompson at the telegraph office.

along the lakeshore road between Keswick and Jackson's Point, following a declaration by Ernest Morton, reeve of North Gwillimbury, proclaiming a war on speeders. The 30-mile speed limit will be enforced he stated. Speed traps are also located along the route.

Reeve Morton's promise to clamp down on speeders followed a meeting with representatives of seven ratepayers' associations of the different beaches. A similar meeting of the summer residents took place a week ago, following the death of a nine-year-old boy, when he was struck by a motorist.

The 30-mile limit by-law has been approved by the department of highways and by county officials. Reeve Morton explained, declaring also that some motorists claim the township has no right to limit this section of roadway to 30 miles an hour.

HOMER BY CASE WINS FOR MT. A.

Sharon community park was the scene of the best game played so far in the Lake Simcoe softball league when the Mount Albert boys visited the Sharon club on Tuesday evening and won by the close score of 3-2.

A large crowd of fans witnessed the game to cheer their favorite team. Both Mitchell of the Mount Albert nine and Ganton, Sharon's choice, pitched masterful ball, and each had several strike-outs to his credit. Both pitchers were well supported by their respective catchers, Harry Draper of Mount Albert and Jack Smith, Sharon.

Mount Albert opened the scoring in the first inning when Mitchell hit a triple, and scored on Ward's single. Neither team were able to get a runner over the plate again until the sixth inning when the Mount Albert team scored another run.

A single by Pegg, who stole second base, and counted on a single from the bat of "Tarzan" Stewart. Sharon came back strong in the same inning to tie up the game when Ross Eves, the first batter up, hit a single and Captain Bill Newfeldt, who had been walked twice before, drove a home run.

Mitchell, however, settled down again to get the next three men. Mount Albert won their game in the seventh inning when Morley Case hit a homer with no one on bases to make the score 3-2 in Mount Albert's favor.

Only three men faced Mitchell in Sharon's last batting and all were retired at first base. A great running one-handed catch of a line drive by Don Smith was the feature fielding play of the game.

The McLeod Bros. were umpires.
